Mortuaries as recorded in the Air Raid Precautions Committee Minutes

Report of the Medical Officer of Health H R Tighe, 1939

For some years the approaching conflict had been visible, and the growing perils of air war eventually led to the creation of what was practically a new department of state, the Air Raid Precautions Department of the Home Office, with an associated section in the Ministry of Health. Under the Air Raid Precautions Act, medical officers of health of scheme making authorities became the administrative heads of the authorities' casualty services, each Casualty Service being composed of several sections: First Aid Parties, Ambulance Service, and First Aid Posts. These medical officers of health were also responsible for the Emergency Hospital provision in their areas, till the emergency hospitals were eventually taken over by the Ministry of Health when the medical officers were appointed Agents for the Hospital Officers of the Ministry. The raising and training of a new army of nurses known as Civil Nursing Reserve also became the local responsibility of the medical officer of health, as did the collection of the dead and mortuary provision, as well as the decontamination of clothing.

The following are extracts from the Air Raid Precautions Committee Minutes:

June 1940 The Medical Officer of Health reported upon the transfer of the temporary mortuary at the Old Guildhall to the Wycliffe Schoolroom, Clarence Street, which would be rented from the Vicar of Swansea at a nominal rent.

June 1940 The Borough Estate Agent reported upon negotiations he had conducted with the Vicar of Christ Church and recommended that the Hall, Billiard room and premises adjoining St Faiths, St Helens Road, be rented for use as a temporary mortuary at an exclusive rental of £39 per annum.

Nov. 1940 The Medical Officer for Health reported that the Welsh Board of Health has sanctioned the provision, in accordance with the plans and estimates of the Borough Architect of temporary Mortuary Accommodation, at:

- Wycliffe Schoolroom
- Christ Church Mens' Club (St Faiths)
- Danygraig Cemetery
- Morryston Cemetery
- Oystermouth Cemetery

Mar. 1941 The Medical Officer of Health recommended the engagement of a staff to deal with deaths due to enemy action as follows:

Mortuary Superintendent H J Irwin	£50 per annum plus £2 2s per day of 12 hours when called upon to undertake the work of dealing with deaths due to war operations
Deputy Mortuary Superintendent C. Carr	£30 per annum plus £3 3s per day of 12 hours when called upon to undertake the work of dealing with deaths due to war operations
4 Mortuary Assistants S Griffiths C Moggridge T Murphy F Robins	£30 per annum plus £3 3s per day of 12 hours when called upon to undertake the work of dealing with deaths due to war operations

2 Mortuary Assistants	£1 13 per day of 12 hours when called upon to undertake the work of dealing with deaths due to war operations

Aug. 1941 Civilian deaths due to War Operations. The Controller reported that:

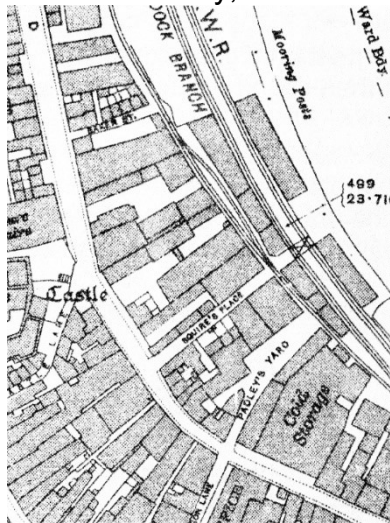

- There is an obligation upon the Committee to bury civilian dead due to War Operations where no other arrangements are made for the disposal of such bodies
- When the Corporation bury such bodies, they meet the burial expenses, including the cost of the grave, and the grave then becomes vested in the Corporation
- The near relatives of the deceased desire to acquire the right of burial in perpetuity in the graves thus owned by the Corporation, and the Committee's approval is requested to the suggestion that the graves should be transferred to the near relatives of the deceased on application being made on the scale of charges already adopted by the Corporation
- It has already been ascertained that the Welsh Board of Health will not object to the proposals

Report of the Medical Officer of Health H R Tighe, 1941

In this year when Swansea has had the honour of being one of the great towns selected by the enemy for his special attention, it may be fitting to allude to the Civil Defence Casualty Service that lusty graft upon the Health Department which sprang into full growth at the same time that our permanent officers left for military or other national duties. This incubus subjected the Department to an almost unbearable strain. To appreciate the magnitude of the burden one must recollect the circumstances existing in the early days of the war when the risk of large scale aerial attack in the West seemed so remote that economy was urged as the first consideration. Consequently the Casualty Service had to be formed almost entirely from unpaid personnel, with no paid officers, and depending for clerical service on the depleted clerical staff of the Health Department. In Swansea the task was also much greater than in many more favoured towns. Here there was no municipal transport service with its trained personnel, its garages and its workshops upon which to build the vehicular sections of a Casualty Service. Beginning with nothing, all had to be created. Even this does not reveal the full measure of the work. The problem was not the raising and equipment of a military force based on knowledge and experience accumulated through centuries. For purposes of Civil Defence the country had to bring into being an organisation the like of which the world had never known before, apart from experiences in Spain. It was inevitable that as knowledge was gained and as resources increased, the orders of the sanctioning authorities must vary. This resulted in much work having to be done twice over and sometimes more than twice. The final assessment of results may be left to those who can enjoy the perspective of distance. It must now suffice to record the following facts. Up to the present the Casualty Service has promptly responded to all calls made upon it. Throughout all attacks on the town it has functioned automatically, smoothly, without interruption, and without having to call upon outside aid except for surgical teams. Of the total casualties, two-thirds recovered and one-third died, while of those who lived to be loaded on ambulances or cars, seven out of every eight recovered.
